SELECTED THE TEACHING FORCE FOR THE NEXT YEAR

Professor Witherbee Elected Principal, and Competent Staff to Work Under Him Chosen.
[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Brodhead, April 27.—At a meeting of the board of education held on Monday evening the following teachers were elected for next year: Principal, Prof. O. D. Witherbee, of Lowell; Miss Nellie Halford and Miss Lathrop; eighth grade, Mr. Briggs; seventh grade, Miss Price; sixth grade, untilled; fourth and fifth grades, Miss Wittner; second and third graders, Miss Helen Beckwith; South side building, fourth and fifth grades, Miss Bruce; second and third grades, Miss Kurney. The primary is not yet without a teacher.

"What'd he do?" asked the other girl.

"He got hold of my shoulder and shook me and wanted to know what on earth was the matter," giggled the girl at the ribbon counter. "And of course I couldn't tell him that I wasn't expecting him. He kept asking what was so funny, and whenever he did

"So does everybody else," said the other girl, ruthlessly. "He ain't so different from the rest of the world when you come right down to it, even though you may think so."

"Well, anyhow," pursued the girl with the ribbons, "when I heard the bell ring I ran out part way down the stairs to meet him. He sort of knew to have me act as though he was welcome, know."

"Huh!" said the other girl. "Why don't you have it woven on a door mat?"

"Maybe you think you're funny!" indignantly said the young woman at the ribbon counter. "Just as I made the turn in the stairs I ran right into him. And who do you suppose it was? It was Art!"

"So does everybody else," said the other girl, ruthlessly. "He ain't so different from the rest of the world when you come right down to it, even though you may think so."

"Well," said the other girl, pausing in the operation of marking tags, "what's you do?"

"If you could 'a' seen him now!" giggled the girl at the ribbons. "Sort of bowdlerized and scared and uncertain! There was I rushing down the stairs in my eagerness to meet him, as he supposed, and I guess he thought at first I was just sitting at home all those months waiting to hear him ring the door bell. Why, I just hung hold of the newel post and burst out laughing, and after I started I couldn't stop. I simply shrieked! I wish you could 'a' seen him!"

"What'd he do?" asked the other girl.

"Did he believe you?" inquired the girl who was marking tags.

"I think he had his doubts," giggled the girl who had finished assorting the ribbons. "But he is coming to see me again tonight."

— Heraldry.

According to the highest authorities, heraldry finds its starting point in the totemism of prehistoric man. In the barbaric custom of painting or carving the totem on ears, the bows and sides of canoes, weapons, pillars in front of houses, etc., and in tattooing it on the various parts of the body, as we have the real origin of the insignia that are so precious to the upper-classes of to-day. It was in the ignorant superstition of the savage that he sprang from a crane or a bear, or some other animal that the various "coats of arms" of the "big families" of the present time found their inception.—New York American.

The Philosopher of Folly.

"It's awfully hard for me to understand," says the Philosopher of Folly.

"How pug-dogs can like the sort of people that like them."

Making Him Feel at Home

"It was perfectly dreadful," said the girl with the imitation Irish lace collar, as she straightened the bolts of ribbon on her counter.

"It must 'a' been funny! What was it?" said the girl who was marking the price tags.

"I just shrik whenever I think of it!" pursued the girl who was straightening the ribbons. "I'm calling me like that when I hadn't seen him in such a time! You see, I've been keeping steady company now with Mr. Sykes for several weeks, an Art and we haven't seen much of each other."

"I think Art is better looking than James Sykes," interrupted the girl who was marking tags. "He has more style!"

"Well, he hasn't got the salary if he has the style!" said the young woman who was straightening the ribbons. "I'm calling me like that when I hadn't seen him in such a time! THE POSTAL BANK BILL.

There is every probability that a postal bank bill will be passed by congress at the present session. Although the republican leaders state that it will not come up for consideration until after the other important administration measures are cared for, it is safe to say that the senate measure will not be passed by the house and the bill which will emerge from the committee rooms will be much changed to meet the requirements imposed by the regular Republicans of the house.

It is an insurgent measure and the regulars in the house would prefer to bury it altogether. Were it not for the indecision of the president that the postal savings bank pledge in the republican platform shall be carried out, it is more than probable that nothing more would be heard of the matter beyond the fact that it had been "laid over" this session.

Congressional Weeks seem to have been very frank with the President in laying the situation before him. He informed Mr. Taft that of the nineteen members of the House committee having the bill in charge, only two, Morris, Murdock and Stafford, were cordially in favor of it. Still, a majority of the committee will support a postal savings bank bill, the senate measure or some other, because, in the first place, a postal bank system has been promised by the party, and, in the second place, because Mr. Taft has made it a part of his legislative program. It is not difficult to see in Representative Wenck's statement, or in the statements of other friends of the administration who have spoken or written on the subject, that the support to be given the measure, even though it should be amended to embody the views of the regulars, will lack enthusiasm. The insurgents may be anxious to vote for it, but they are in no position to press it.

Nevertheless, the leaders on the regular side have promised the president to pass a postal savings bank bill of some kind. To accomplish this there must be compromise and concession on all sides, and there is always the hope that should compromise and concession prevail in one instance the experience might be pleasant and satisfactory enough to encourage their trial in others.

COMFORTING WORDS.
With the temperature rising and promise from the weather man of more springlike weather it is interesting to note what "paper like" the Wall Street Journal has to say of the recent April snow storm and freezing days and nights. The eastern paper calls it the great western storm and then goes on in the following manner to present its views that the damage will not be as severe as was anticipated.

Such a climatic disturbance as that which covered the upper portion of the Mississippi drainage basin on Saturday and has meanwhile traveled farther south and east, be the natural reaction of a premature rise in temperature which had occurred during the earlier portion of April, resulting in a much earlier planting and seedling of crops than has usually been the case. One extreme has followed another with the result of inflicting enormous damages on vegetation which was unusually early in its development. Yet there are certain mitigating circumstances which should be taken into account before the business judgment of the country finally comes into full value the results of such a catastrophe.

It should be remembered, to begin with, that orchards and vegetables have had a much better start than usual and consequently a much greater opportunity to attain that degree of hardness which renders repose in cold weather even to freezing temperature. On this account, there may be much less damage than was at first estimated. Furthermore, the fruit trees in many of the orchard districts could undergo the loss of half of their bearing without prejudicing the quality and the marketable quantity of the ultimate yield.

For most other crops, any fatal damage may be partly recovered by replanting under highly favorable conditions of the soil. Winter wheat and rye are too old to be hurt, and spring wheat and oats are too young to be injured beyond recovery or remodeling. With a gradual return of reasonable weather, it will be found that, in spite of the inevitable damage extending to millions of dollars, the capacity for recovery will soon assert itself, and the marks of the storm within thirty days or more be very largely obliterated.

ROOSEVELTIAN POLICIES.
Kansas and Nebraska are at odds with the Taft regime. They resent the name of insurgents and insist that they are simply following the policies of Roosevelt which President Taft and his advisers are ignoring. Senator Chapin of Minnesota hurl defiance at the white house in a fiery speech in which he says that republicanism does not exist there. Following the lead of La Follette other senators have done all they could to deride the Taft administration and even in Wisconsin the fight between the elements of the republican party seem to be along the line of Taft and anti-Taft, but Wisconsin differs from Kansas and Nebraska in that it makes no pretense of attempting to substantiate their position by calling it following the Roosevelt policies. Kansas and Nebraska present peculiar situations. They appear to be completely out of sympathy with the Taft administration. They are especially antagonistic to the Payne-Aldrich tariff, which the president on several occasions has defended, not, however, on the ground that it is what the people demanded or what they want, but rather on the ground that it is an improvement over its predecessor—a step, therefore, in the right direction, and the best that could possibly have been obtained at the time. The Kansas and Nebraska, with all the other states west of the Allegheny mountains, would go democratic. There is no basis for this except the fact that the Kansans and Nebrascans are dissatisfied with the Taft administration. The insurgents in the two states do not like to have it said that they are democrats. They are above all things Rooseveltians, and if Theodore Roosevelt on his return should after a careful inquiry into the matter, find that President Taft is carrying out, practically, the policies which Colonel Roosevelt initiated and prosecuted, and should proclaim this fact to the country, there is no part of it in which the present administration would be affected more favorably than in Kansas and Nebraska.

It does not follow from all this, however, that either Kansas or Nebraska has become lukewarm in its devotion to the republican party. The statement was made not long since that, if an election were held at this time, Kansas and Nebraska, with all the other states west of the Allegheny mountains, would go democratic. There is no basis for this except the fact that the Kansans and Nebrascans are dissatisfied with the Taft administration. The insurgents in the two states do not like to have it said that they are democrats. The situation in these two states has been pronounced peculiar. It is peculiar in other respects than in that already referred to. Kansas and Nebraska were never in all their history more prosperous than they are today. Industrially, there is nothing of which they can reasonably complain. Yet seldom have they been more discontented politically.

The New York man who made a mistake and discovered some two hundred thousand dollars worth of jewelry that had been hidden in a hollow post ought to write a story about it and put it on the market as one of the best sellers of the year. Many a man has made just one mistake and it has cost him more than two hundred thousand dollars to repair himself.

Down at Lake Forest university there is a student who is so much a devotee to music and art that he has been starving himself all the week to save enough money to go to Chicago and hear grand opera at a bargain price. Usually the people who starve themselves are those who do not have money to buy food with, and this trifling with nature is foolish even if beautiful Claude is the goal.

Twenty-one countries have united in opening in Washington a bureau of American republics. It is described by Andrew Carnegie as "a capital in the capital of the United States, of all American nations." Senator Elihu Root calls it a "temple of peace, commerce and friendship."

With the west, middle west and south all freezing after the warm March weather the temperature in Newfoundland is said to have been eighty-five. This is going a little too far in the playing of favorites and, if he does not look out the weather man will find himself ditched.

Toxins express great worry over the possibility of New York, Massachusetts or Pennsylvania coming to the front this year with a larger crop of democrats than the Lone Star State does. Others have the same worry.

We believe Senator Clapp, he and his small handful of followers are the only true republicans of the country. We have heard the same talk here in Wisconsin for so many years that really it is getting very tiresome.

THE POET PHILOSOPHER
By WALT MASON.
(Copyright, 1909, by George Matthew Adams.)

The railway station in our town is noisy, commonplace and plain; yet scores of people make down and gather there to meet THE DEPOT room is bleak and bare, LOAFERS in a place of never-ending din; yet fifty loafers gather there each day to see the train come in. The station agent's life is hard; the loafers make it grim and gray; they drive the poor man nearly mad, for they are always in the way. The passengers can only complain, their townward way begins, for they must struggle through the mob that's there to see the train come in. The men who have their work to do are hindered in a hundred ways; in vain they weep and cry out "Shoo!" they can't dispense the loafing jays. These loafers always do the same; they tell not, neither do they spin; they have no other end or aim, than just to see the train come in. Five traveled west, and every Sunday in the land appears to have its loafers, the lazy, idle, useless band; I know the station loafer well; he likes to stand on his elbow; he has an ancient, fishlike smell; he lives to see the train come in. Oh, Osler, get your chloroform, and fill your glass syringe again, and come and try to make things warm for those who both buy meat! For loafers, standing in the way, when standing is a yellow sin. For those who gather, day by day, to see a one-horse train come in!

SAYS NOT GUILTY TO CHARGES MADE

CHARLES BURROUGH, A HARNESS MAKER, CHARGED WITH ARSON.

ARRESTED HERE TUESDAY

And Taken to Madison Where He Entered Plea of Not Guilty and His Bail Is Fixed at $4,000.

Charles Burroughs of Madison, employed as a harness maker at the John C. Nichols factory since March 5th and before that by the Burdette & Echlin company, was arrested here late yesterday afternoon by Sheriff Haibach of Madison and taken to that city to answer to the charge of arson. The affair was handled very quietly and none of Burroughs' friends in the factory knew of his arrest until today.

Burroughs lived in Madison, working here during the week and returning to the Capital City every Saturday night for over Sunday. According to the Madison dispatches Burroughs was the hero on April 13th at a fire which destroyed the house and contents where he and his wife lived, by rescuing his wife at the risk of his own life from the burning structure.

According to the Madison dispatches the officers in investigating the fire and its cause allege that some of the furniture which Burroughs claimed to have lost in the fire and damages for which he filed with the insurance company, had been removed before the fire started. This gave rise to a suspicion of arson and a warrant was soon sworn out for Burroughs' arrest and he was taken into custody.

In the municipal court in Madison this morning Burroughs pleaded not guilty to the information filed against him charging him with arson and his bail was fixed by Judge Donavan at four thousand dollars, which he was unable to furnish, and he is held in the Dane county jail pending the trial which will come off within a few days.

Friends of Burroughs in Janesville believe that there has been some mistake as regards the matter and are loath to think that he would be guilty of arson as charged. The home is thought to be in Ohio although he has lived in Madison some time previous to coming to Janesville. He has been an industrious workman and was well thought of by his fellow workers.

At the time of the destruction of his home Burroughs carried his wife out at the risk of his own life and was thought to have been seriously burned while doing it. His wife was sick and he wrapped the bed clothes about her to save her life.

JURY HAD AGREED AT MID-AFTERNOON

On a Verdict in the Assault and Battery Case But Attorney Deatrich Could Not Be Found.

George Cunningham was the last witness for the defense to take the stand this morning in the assault and battery case growing out of the town of Janesville ballroom fracas. He said that he struck Hill when he saw him raise a stick of cordwood as if to fell somebody with it. On rebuttal Manley Fish, owner of the farm, W. C. Churchill, Mrs. Churchill, and W. J. Hill, were questioned with particular reference to the supposed presence of a rack in the kitchen behind which two of the defendants were alleged to have placed their hats and the defendant's claim that Hill and Churchill kicked the horse.

Argument of State.

Attorney O. A. Ostreich in beginning his closing argument for the state paid tribute to the abilities of the opposing counsel as a criminal lawyer, stating that it was a tradition in Janesville that when anybody committed breaking the law they first took pains to injure us to the state of Mr. Nolan's health. He admitted that the defendants were good looking boys and regretted that they had gotten into trouble which they shouldn't have been in. But they had violated the law and ought to bear the punishment. They had admitted that they struck the blows and the argument of self-defense could not be supported even by their own evidence. Nor could he regard as anything but a silly pretext the effort to make it appear that two of them left the farm house without their hats and afterwards went back solely for the purpose of getting them. If their intent had been peaceful, why had all four, and particularly the two newcomers—Fanning and Cunningham—left the rigs out in the road in charge of the girls. Alluding to the little passage at arms between the counsel for the prosecution and W. J. Hill, he said that thus far the home was favorable to Hill—that the former had not introduced any evidence in support of his opening statement that one of the two girls had been nicknamed "Potato" by the Hill family. The young girl who was put on the stand must have been there for ornamental purposes, since she heard and remembered nothing of what occurred. Counsel paid his respects to the practice of young girls riding unchaperoned with young men at midnight and in closing emphasized the fact that the doors were open all the time and that with this situation any theory of self-defense was ridiculous.

Defense's Argument.

As the counsel for the prosecution had predicted, Attorney Nolan for the defense made a leading issue of W. J. Hill and laid most of the trouble directly at his door, attributing it to him repeatedly. In picturesque word images, the defendants, he said, had been invited to the party. It was a public affair; an admission price was charged; and a series of similar dances with money making as the chief object had been held at the Churchill place during the winter. Objection was made only to the ladies and he left it to the jury to judge whether or not the one who had been placed on the witness stand was not a perfect lady in every way. The kicking of the horse by Churchill and Hill constituted the first assault and battery. Tubbs had gone to the barn and O'Donnell was out doors when the girls left the house and the trouble about the horse, which immediately attracted their attention, was sufficient explanation why they had left without their hats. The Churchills and Hills had hurried to the complaints in order to forestall the defendants, who were the parties with the real grievances, and instead of commencing damage actions, were permitting the public to pay the expense of their entertainment and were growing fat on it. After stating that the worst thing that ever infested India could not have made a more murderous assault than did Darby Hill, the attorney declared that he wouldn't dare make such statements were not assured that the radiators were fastened down and there was nothing loose which Mr. Hill could catch hold of with which to strike him. Speaker had only empty hands. Even after the incident in the ball-room, nobody had told Tubbs and O'Donnell that they were not welcome there and they had no reason to suspect trouble in getting back their hats.

CASE BEFORE THE JURY.

Counsel for the defense finished his argument at noon and Attorney Ostreich made his closing plea and Judge Fifele instructed the jury this afternoon.

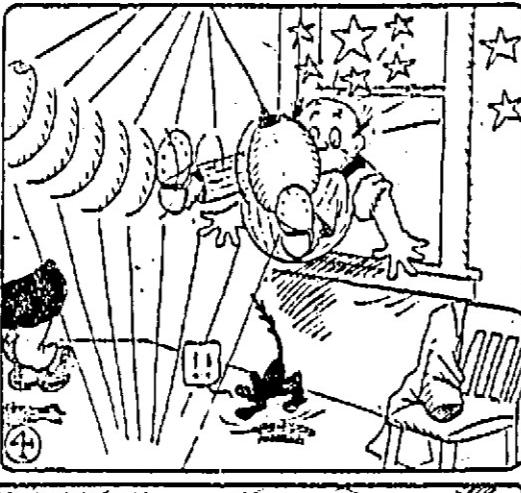

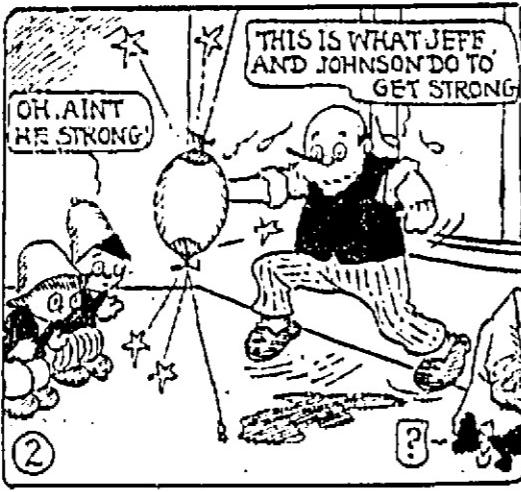

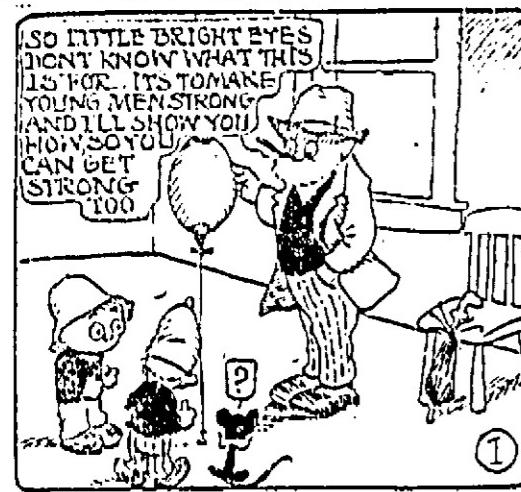

At 3:30 this afternoon the jury had agreed upon a verdict but Attorney O. A. Ostreich, for the prosecution, could not be located. The nature of the verdict could not be learned.

Verdict was "not guilty."

A COAL SAVER

Peck-Williamson Under-Feed Furnace

When you build your house, consider the heating proposition thoroughly. It's a mighty important thing.

Look at this furnace. It's different than the ordinary kinds. You see the coal is fed into the fire-box from underneath the fire in the center of the furnace. The gas from the coal cannot escape up the chimney, it is burned and turned into heat units. The coal eventually becomes coke. The heat you get is greater and more, even than that given by the old style overfeed furnaces. Sold by

HINTS TO PROSPECTIVEBUILDERS

FOR the mutual benefit of reader and advertiser we have concentrated on this page a considerable volume of advertising that bears directly on the subject of home building. It would be very interesting to know how many of the Gazette's readers are thinking about this subject of planning for it in the future. Beyond a doubt there are many who are actually building at the present time, and many more who will build during the summer. For that reason we believe that the advertising on this page will be of special value to them, telling as it does where you can get thoroughly reliable articles and workmanship necessary to the building of a home.

THE THEATER

Big Minstrels Coming.
Richards & Pringle's famous Georgia Minstrels, which appear at the Myers Theatre on Thursday, April 28 claim to have the best company they have ever carried. It's a large one, numbering forty people, and includes a large number of well-known names of the minstrel field. There will be a big street parade at noon and Simpson's Challenge Band will give one of their pleasing concerts.

Among the season's novelties offered by this company are Moor the Hindu Magician; the Alabama Quartet, the big double Dancing Sextette; Wilson and Knott, the clever knockabouts, and the Filipino novelty, the Phantom House. The scenery and wardrobe is all new and novel and the lighting effects are novel and on a large scale of grandeur.

This is the company's thirtieth tour, and they're making it a memorable one. Seats are now selling for the engagement.

Joseph M. Weber's comedy drama "The Climax" by Edward Locke, with Miss Leonia Watson, Ellington Pluto, Howard Lange; Thos. Fallon, and the original New York production, is the attraction announced at the Myers Theatre Friday evening, April 29. "The Climax" comes direct from a run of almost a year on Broadway.

In "The Climax" the author attempted and succeeded in writing a play of unusual charm. How well he accomplished his purpose is known to all who have followed the career of "The Climax" and the unquestioned approval which it has won from all who have seen it.

The jaded theatrical appetite has long craved for something more palatable than the wronged woman and the ruined financier. "The Climax" is a comedy of sentiment and malady. The idea is new, the construction is novel, the dialogue brilliant and the musical background exquisite. The stunts are natural and the presentation unlabored. Surely this combination should make a most appealing offering. Mr. Joseph M. Weber has produced "The Climax" with the same care and thought which has made his musical offerings so successful. So much attention has been given to minute details that it is said, when the curtain rises, a stage picture is not shown; rather the humble home of a struggling music teacher, in the cheaper section of New York is in evidence. The impression that "The Climax" will appeal only to the lovers of music should not be formed. It is the strong, vivid, impressive play of the moment. Whether you are musical or not, it cannot fail to have its effect. It is a clean, delightful play, artistically presented.

Joseph Carl Breit composed all the music in the play. Since the opening night "The Song of a Soul" and

"The Even Song" have become known from one end of the country to the other. "The Climax" will be presented with the same great cast seen here last January.

IS PRESENTED $110,000 FUND.
Token of Appreciation is Given Canada's Financial Minister.

Ottawa, April 27.—W. H. Fielding's services as minister of finance during the last 12 years were recognized in a striking manner when last night he was presented a fund approximately of $110,000.

The presentation took place at a small dinner attended by the Dominion premier, Sir Wilfrid Laurier, and prominent members of the Liberal party.

Like many another statesman who has given the best years of his life to his country, Mr. Fielding has given little thought to the accumulation of a private fortune. The salary of Dominion cabinet ministers amounts to $10,000 a year.

The subscription lists are not yet closed, yet the total amount is $110,000, and will probably reach $120,000.

New Jersey Governor Will Not Investigate Solons' Misconduct.

Trenton, N. J., April 27.—Governor Fort gave out a statement in which he says he has no intention of calling a special session of the legislature to investigate the alleged misconduct on the closing night of the recent session of the general assembly. The governor says:

"The character of the episode was not such as to warrant the governor in resorting to a call for an extraordinary session of the legislature. Only inadvertent or, at most, questionable conduct is alleged; no crime is charged."

Alton, Ill., April 27.—Thirteen-year-old Nina Antilla committed suicide in school in the presence of her teacher and 30 playmates by drinking carbolic acid. She left a pathetic note on her desk in which she said her heart was broken because her foster mother scolded her.

English Adopt American Plan.
American show window lighting is being introduced in London. It is customary in the English capital for shopkeepers to barricade every window with heavy iron shutters just as soon as the day's business is over. This is a relic of those ancient days when it was not safe to leave the shop unprotected, but the American plan of window displays and well-lighted store fronts is being successfully introduced.

One of His Worries.
A receptacle containing a dark red beverage—it may have been merely tea—was brought on the table.
"I'll play P'n hooters," said the professor's granddaughter, "and as I am a society lady, it is my duty to pour."
"Yes, let her do it," said the professor. "She's not only a society lady but she's a society queen—and she never reigns but she pours."
Otherwise the function was a great success.

DEDICATION TODAY OF PAN-AMERICAN BUREAU.

SOL THERN TOWN LIFTED BY TORNADO.

First picture of the frightful wreck of the once populous town of six hundred inhabitants, Woodland, Ga. Atlanta, Ga.—The cyclone which crossed the southern state last Friday centered its work of devastation on the little town of Woodland, 55 miles west of here. Scarcely a wall was left standing. Several people were killed and scores of others injured.

MR. AND MRS. GETRICHQUICK

MAY WALK OUT OF PRESIDENT TAFT'S CABINET.

Left to right—Secretary of State that within the year no less than five bear the brunt of the fight alone. When he entered the cabinet he expected to be the man behind the president with his advice, but this has gradually shifted to the shoulders of Attorney General Wickesham,

Secretary of the Interior Ballinger, will resign for one reason or another. Secretary of War Dickinson and Secretary Knox will get out of the cabinet if his present frame of mind continues to guide him. He has stood up under much criticism of his department policies and has had to give way to Mr. Wickesham his far eastern polity was being subjected to much criticism. The Nicaraguan mishap also bothered the secretary. The final step in this came when the state department withdrew the fleet from Nicaragua—the fleet which went to the Caribbean with colors flying to punish Zelaya. Secretary Knox's career in the cabinet has not pleased him and he is ready to quit.

Secretary of the Treasury MacVean is willing to stay in office, but is not keen for it. He is growing in years and his active business career has earned him a rest. He is not highly regarded by the stand pat leaders of the senate and house. They say he is a Democrat and a free trader. The secretary's objections to the Payne tariff law, which the president strongly approves, have put him outside the broad work with the "old guard" and they are on his trail.

Secretary of War Dickinson says he is not considering the Democratic senatorship from Tennessee, but he goes no further. He will not say what he will do if he becomes a factor in the race for Mr. Frazier's seat. His friends say he is becoming irksome to him to be sitting as a Democrat at a Republican council-table and jeopardizing his chances of participating in the Democratic reward which he expects in the near future.

Postmaster General Hitchcock's going from the cabinet is a matter which the people will have to order. Mr. Hitchcock is going to guide the Republican congressional campaign. He will not resign unless he is criticized for his dual role.

Secretary Ballinger is holding office under difficulties. As soon as the congressional investigation committee comes to a conclusion in the row between the secretary and Clifford Pugh, Mr. Ballinger will retire. It does not matter if he is cleared.

James Wilson, the dean of the cabinet, may not stay at the head of the department of agriculture for the remainder of the presidential term, but he suits Mr. Taft as an official. Mr. Wilson is getting old, however, and may want to retire before Mr. Taft's time is up.

"I can no longer," said Mr. Martin proudly to his wife.

"You're getting awfully careful, John, since you had your life insured," returned Mrs. Martin.

CORPORAL ALBERT J. MYER, "Millionaire Soldier" Wins Way from Ranks to Lieutenant.

Richmond, Va.—Embarrassment among the young army officials at Ft. Myer promises to be dispelled through the announcement that Corporal Albert J. Myer, the "millionaire soldier," has passed the examination for a lieutenantcy and will receive his commission soon.

Corporal Myer is a grandson of Brigadier General Albert Myer, the founder of the signal corps, who served in the civil war, and after whom Fort Myer is named. His father, Major Albert J. Myer, served in Cuba during the Spanish war as major of the 202d New York regiment. Not willing to take chances of winning an appointment to West Point, and less willing to spend four years in the regular army in Boston, his son Myer won him an appointment as corporal.

While Corporal Myer is affectionately known among his comrades as the "millionaire soldier," he is not in reality a millionaire, although he is wealthy. He is a favorite in Washington and is frequently in attendance upon the very events at which officers of the fort, sometimes through duty, but more often through inclination, find themselves.

When his day's duty is done Corporal Myer lays aside his enlisted man's uniform, dons evening clothes, enters his automobile as it arrives from its city garage, and armed with a pass desends upon Washington.

Not long ago, at a banquet of a military society in Washington, Major General J. Franklin Bell, chief of staff, and Colonel Garrad, at that time commanding at Fort Myer, noticed an attractive young man at the table, and finally it dawned on them that the young man was Corporal Myer. An investigation next day disclosed that while in the dual time Corporal Myer was a soldier, he frequently became a man of fashion at night.

Several similar occurrences led the officers further to investigate the career of the "millionaire soldier." At one of the bachelors' cotillions in Washington Corporal Myer was a guest to the consternation, it is said, of several young officers of the fort who were present.

WOMAN'S PAGEThe Evening Chit-Chat

By RUTH CAMERON

NO, MABLE wasn't pretty, wasn't clever, wasn't stylish, didn't even have that "indefinable something" with which authors endow their heroines nowadays when they want to make them a bit different, and yet Mable had always been taken quite in much and rather more than any of the prettier or more clever girls, and had just announced her engagement to the most eligible man in town.

Whence her popularity? Half a dozen of us had been discussing that subject about the ten-table when mine hostess' brother dawned upon us.

Now Ted had at one time worshipped at Mable's shrine, but being now elsewhere engaged or, at least, on the verge of it, we felt it wouldn't be treading on too sacred ground to appeal to him on this mysterious question.

So we did. What was it made all the men like Mable so?

Ted mused.

"No, I know she isn't so pretty, although she always looks and acts as if she felt well, which is a good deal more of a card than prettiness with a good many men, but I'll tell you what it is—Mable's folly. It just does a man good to take her anywhere because she has such a good time."

"Take some girls about and they are always fussing if things don't go just so, if any little thing goes wrong they are all upset."

"But Mable—well, she's a real sport. She doesn't know what fussing means. I took her to the theatre once and the seats were a good deal farther to one side than I thought they were going to be, and we couldn't see one corner of the stage at all, but in the other corner we could see way into the wings."

"I felt like a duffer to have gotten such seats and any other girl would have looked bored, but Mable, she just laughed and said she'd always wanted to know what it looked like behind the scenes and how exciting it was to be able to see the people waiting for their cues before they came on."

"And then another time we went canoeing and the blooming canoe leaked and the canoe cushions got wet and the color ran all over her nice white dress. Any other girl would have looked daggers at me for letting the canoe leak, but Mable said wasn't it splendid? It was a white dress because it would wash out so easily, and that it would have had to go in the tub anyway, and said it was if she meant it, too, and they acted as if it should forgotten all about it and made me forget what a nut I'd been."

"And then, no matter where we went or what we did, Mable always seemed to have such a rippling good time. It was a pleasure to go anywhere at all with her."

"No, maybe she isn't as stylish or pretty as some of the girls, but I can tell you right now that the man that's going to marry Mable is a mighty lucky fellow," concluded mine hostess' brother with a vigor which I felt would not have been wholly approved of in the quarter where he was otherwise engaged, or about to be.

Prettiness and style and cleverness and, even that "indefinable something" are more or less qualities which one might be born with to possess, but the quality which won Dick's approval and the heart of the most eligible man in town any girl can possess if she will.

Honestness, genuine enthusiasm, and enjoyment of simple things—sophomore! In the good sense of the term—these are attractions which men are growing to appreciate more and more as they come to look upon women as companions rather than ornaments, and they are qualities which may be long to you if you only care to have them.

TRAITS OF CHARACTER

By MARY RUSSELL.

Does your mouth turn up at the corners, or is there a downward droop? Look in the glass and see.

Ah, you are looking pleasant to yourself, for all the world as if you were posing in front of a camera.

Queer how hard it is for the average woman to keep the disengaged look on the face which it wears the greater part of the time, when she looks upon her own reflection in a mirror.

Watch men in elevators where there is a chance to see their reflection, and you will notice a straightening of drooped shoulders, a lifting of sour lips into smiles—a cheery smile for oneself, that is fairly wanted.

It is an amusing trait, if it were not such a disagreeable one, that we keep the pleasantest looks of all for ourselves. We think we are honest in our estimate of our own characters, but our reflections are witness against us.

"I know my own soul as only God knows it," says the self-centered individual. "I make no mistakes in the estimate of my own character," proudly remarks another, and a third will claim, that at least he understands and makes no overestimate of the latter self.

We are so busy with our patty affairs that we overlook some of the biggest things in life.

We aim for social power, for club supremacy, for church recognition if we are women, and for political or business success. If we are men, and forget that the living of a righteous life is all that is required of us.

The one thing that death does not rob us of is the character we build in this life.

Somehow, somewhere, it is of use to be under another's gaze. If it is in the humor of orthodoxy, it is the character that we have built that counts—not the money we have made, it is the earthly love we have harvested—not the social success that has been gained.

I see so much of sin and blot, I hesitate to draw the line.

Where that has not,

If it is the death of the Theosophist that comes—the death that is not a falling asleep, but a falling awake—then indeed does the character count.

For the ones to come the bits of shining merit we have built into the fabric of our lives is all that is worth remembering.

In a world we are growing better in we have a broader outlook. The vista lengthens and we can see farther. Time was when we builded for a day alone, "But flesh unto the day the evil thereof," ay, and suffice the good as well, but how we look to the generations yet unborn to bear the fruit by which we are today planting the seed. And all will always be well.

"In men who men regard as ill, I see so much of goodness still, in men whom men pronounce divine,

I see so much of sin and blot, I hesitate to draw the line Where God has not."

SENATOR CLAPP TURNS FIRE ON WICKERSHAM

Defies Attorney General to Read Any One Out of Republican Party.

Washington, April 27.—Senator Clapp of Minnesota in speaking against the railroad bill in the Senate delivered a broadside against Attorney General Wickersham and defied him to read any one out of the Republican party.

He declared the party had drifted away from its moorings. It had forgotten the teachings of Lincoln Roosevelt, strong and forceful character that he was, and he had never attempted to dictate to his party. And yet "this man," an Mr. Clapp characterized Mr. Wickersham, "had prepared a document like that," he shouted, as he shook a copy of the bill violently in the face of the regulators, "with orders to put it through."

Party harmony, Mr. Clapp said, voluminously, would never come from that sort of dictation. The Republican party never did reside either in the White House or the capitol; it was found throughout the entire country.

Senator Moses E. Clapp.

and no one man ever had or ever would be able to dictate to the people how they should do their duty. While at Chicago, Mr. Clapp said, the attorney general had "presumed to read some of us out of the party because we would not follow blindly the bill which he sent to us."

"Whoever heard of him as a Republican until he entered the president's cabinet?" shouted Mr. Clapp. Answering his own question as to who the men were the attorney general would read out, Mr. Clapp declared they were the men who for the past quarter of a century had borne the brunt of the fight in the battle for the maintenance of the principles of the Republican party.

Senator Clapp said the only way for "this little minority" to get the virile men of the west out of their party was for them to get out themselves.

The great new selection of Chiropractic equipment has shown the world that in order to be made well and to remain well it is necessary to remove the cause of the affliction and that treating the symptom with medicine is not as practical as the Chiropractic adjustments. Every nerve in the entire body is related to every function and organ of the entire human system and every nerve (there being in all) passes through the spine. When certain nerves do not perform their functions the cause of the sickness is to get at the nerves that are not working. This is done by Chiropractic adjustments of the spine. Almost every ailment is curable by the Chiropractic process. If you suffer from sickness or pain, call for free consultation and advice.

IMPERFECTIONS OF MAN

Were Held Up and Discussed by Ladies on Program and Men Speaks

ers Showed Flaws of Women.

The ladies were the guests of the Social Union Club, meeting at their regular "Ladies' Night" meeting.

The session was one of the most delightful ever held by the club and attracted an unusually large number of the members, their wives, and lady friends.

At 6:30 a subcourse dinner was served, and the auditorium.

The tables were decorated with potted plants, a carnation being held at each plate.

Electric light with handsome lamp shades lit the festivities.

Does Your Backache?

If you are a woman and you have this symptom get Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound without delay. Backache seems an invention of the evil one to try woman's souls. Only those who suffer this way can understand the wearing, ceaseless misery.

We ask all such women to read the two following letters for proof that Mrs. Pinkham's medicine cures backache caused by female diseases.

Milwaukee, Wis.—"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has made me a well woman, and I would like to tell the whole world about it. I suffered from female troubles and four-fifths pains in my back. I had the best doctors and they all advised an operation. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound made me a well woman and I have no more backache. I am ready to tell every one what this medicine has done for me."—Mrs. Emma Fine, 833 First Street, Milwaukee, Wis.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—"I had backache for four months steady and tried everything for it, but nothing helped me until I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. After the first bottle I felt a change. I took five bottles and I have had no backache since. I think the Compound is wonderful for women."—Mrs. G. Leiser, 5210 Kinkaid St., E. L. Pittsburg, Pa.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has made thousands of cures of such cases. You notice we say has cured thousands of cases. That means that we are telling you what it has done, not what we think it will do. We are stating facts, not guesses.

We challenge the world to name another remedy for female ills which has been so successful or received so many testimonials as has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

For 30 years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been the standard remedy for female ills. No sick woman does justice to herself who will not try this famous medicine. Made exclusively from roots and herbs, and has thousands of cures to its credit.

Mrs. Pinkham invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health free of charge. Address Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass.

CHAPTER XVI.

Dejeuner à la Fourchette. Woman is a creature between man and the angels.—Honoré de Balzac.

A government agent, it seems, may also in part be little more than a man, after all. In these singular surroundings I found myself not wholly tranquil. . . . At last toward morning I must have slept. It was some time after daybreak when I felt a hand upon my shoulder as I lay still partly clad. Awakened suddenly, I arose and almost overthrew old Threshier, who stood regarding me with no expression whatever upon her brown and wrinkled countenance. She did no

"torch of life!" she mused. "Well! It was only that which you were so eager to pass on to another generation! That was why you were so mad to hasten to the side of that woman. Whereas," she mused still, "it were so much grander and so much nobler to pass on the torch of a principle as well!"

"Do not philosophize with me," I said. "I am already distracted by the puzzle you offer to me. You are so young and beautiful, so fair-in-your-judgment, so kind!"

"In turn, I ask you not to follow that," she remarked coldly. "Let us talk of what you call, I think, backache."

"My dear lady," I began, "my relation to the affairs of the American republic is a very humble one. I am no minister of state, and I know you deal with ministers direct. How, then, shall I gain your friendship for my country? You are dangerous to have for an enemy. Are you too high-priced to have for a friend—for a friend to our union—a friend of the principle of democracy? Come now, you enjoy large questions. Tell me, what does this council mean regarding Oregon? Is it true that England plans now to concentrate all her traders, all her troops, and force them west up the Saskatchewan and into Oregon this coming season? Come now, madam, is it to be war?"

Her curved lips broke into smile that showed again her small white teeth.

"Were you, then, married?" she said.

I only went on, impatient. "Any moment may mean everything to us. I should not ask these questions if I did not know that you were close to Mr. Calhoun."

She looked me square in the eye and nodded her head slowly. "I may say this much, monsieur, that it has pleased me to gain a little further information."

"You will give my government that information?"

"Why should I?"

"Yet you spoke of others who might come here. What others? Who are they? The representatives of Mexico? Some attaché of the British embassy at Washington? Some influence from England itself, sent here direct?"

She smiled at me again. "I told you not to go back to your hotel, did I not?"

"I got no further with her, it seemed.

"You interest me sometimes," she went on slowly, at last, "yet you seem to have so little brain! Now, in your employment, I should think that brain would be somewhat useful at times."

"I do not deny that suggestion, madam."

"But you are unable to analyze.

Thus, in the matter of yourself, I suppose if you were told of it, you would only say that you forgot to look in the toe of the slipper you had."

"Thus far, baroness," I said soberly, "I have asked no special privilege, to tell me what you mean!"

"Did you credit the attaché of Mexico with being nothing more than a drunken rowdy, to follow me across town with a little shoe in his carriage?"

"But you said he was in wine."

"True, but would that be a reason?" Continually you show your lack of brain in accepting as conclusive results which could not possibly have occurred. Granted he was in wine, granted he followed me, granted he had my shoe in his possession—what then? Does it follow that at the ball at the White House he could have removed that shoe? Does monsieur think that I, too, was in wine?"

"Were You Then Married?" She Asked.

more than point the way to a door, where presently I found a bathroom, and so refreshed myself and made the best toilet possible under the circumstances.

My hostess I found awaiting me in the central room of the apartments. She was clad now in a girdled negligee of rich rose-color, the sleeves wide and full, falling back from her round arms. Her dark hair was combed and piled high on her head this morning, regardless of current mode, and confined in heavy twists by a tall golden comb; so that her white neck was left uncovered.

The little table in the center of the room was already spread. I filled my cup from the steaming urn with not the slightest awkwardness, as she nodded for me to be seated. We looked at each other, and, as I may swear, we both broke into smiling laughter.

"I was saying," she remarked presently, "that I would not have you think that I do not appreciate the suffering in which you were plunged by the haste you found necessary in the wedding of your Jeune fille."

But I was on my guard. "At least, I may thank you for your sympathy, madam!" I replied.

"Yet in time," she went on, gone reflective the next instant, "you will see how very unimportant is all this turmoil of love and marriage. That

ITCHING OF SCALP INTOLERABLE

Nearly Wild with Painful, Burning Eruption—Half Her Hair Fell Out and Combing It Was Torture—Feared She Would be Bald.

IN DESPAIR UNTIL CURED BY CUTICURA

"Just about two years ago, some form of humor appeared on my scalp. The beginning was a slight itching but it grew steadily worse until, when I combed my hair, the scalp became raw and the ends of the comb-teeth would be wet with blood. Most of the time there was an intolerable itching, in a painful, burning way, very much as a bad, raw burn, if deep, will feel and smart when first beginning to heal. Combing the hair was positive torture. My hair was long and tangled terribly because of the blood and seepage. This continued growing worse and over half my hair fell out, was in despair, really afraid of becoming totally bald."

"Sometimes the pain was so great that, when partially awake, I would scratch the worst places so that my fingers would be bloody. I could not sleep well and, after being asleep a short time, that awful scratching pain would commence and then I would wake up nearly wild with the irritation. And having it in the camp of all these different interworts?" So, what Pakenham said was true! Van Zandt is the attaché of Texas. Van Zandt is pleading with Mr. Calhoun that he shall take up the secretaryship. Van Zandt promises us every effort to stand out for the annexation of Texas. Van Zandt promises us the steriotone of fronto against treacherous Mexico. Van Zandt is known to be interested in this fair Dona Licetru, just as Polk is. Now, then, comes Van Zandt with his secret message slipped into the hand of madam at the ambassador's ball—madam, the friend of England! The attaché of Mexico is curious—furious—to know what Texas is saying to England. And that message must be concealed! And madam conceals it in."

"This is a voluntary, unsolicited testimonial and I take pleasure in writing it, hoping my experience will help others.

"But life has no bright side!" wailed the pessimist. "Then get busy and polish up the dark side," rejoined the optimist.

LESSON FROM A "PORKER."

I had the opportunity to examine recently a pig weighing 230 pounds that had been fed till maturity on middlings only and then fattened on corn only.

The butcher said that was the only pig he had ever killed whose jaws were not strong enough to support its weight, several of the teeth, having pulled out as it was hoisted and appearing remarkably soft.

There is plenty of bone forming material in milk, more than the adult needs, but not enough in white bread nor in wheat middlings. There is a full supply in entire wheat and in corn bread, but the best source of supply is nuts. Uncooked cabbage and potatoes also contain all the mineral elements of food. The owner said this animal had been remarkably healthy and all its organs were in perfect condition, yet it had lived exclusively upon two arables, much nearer its natural food than the waste from our tables which makes the pig the most diseased of all animals, except man. Omnivorousness is unnatural.

How Far Can You See?

What is the farthest limit to which the human vision can reach? Power in his book, "The Eye and Sight," gives the ability to see the star,

Alcor, situated at the tail of the Great

Bear, as the test. Indeed, the Arabs call it the Test star. It is most exceptional to be able to see Jupiter's satellites with the naked eye, though one or two cases are recorded, the third satellite being the most distinct.

Peruvians are said to be the longest night race on earth. Humboldt reports a case where these Indians perceived a human figure 18 miles away, being able to recognize it was human and clad in white. This is probably the record for sight.
